

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Aeroguard Security Part of Joint Venture that Wins Security Screening Contract for 2010 Olympic Games

VANCOUVER – April 17 – Aeroguard Security Limited (Aeroguard) and their joint venture partners from Contemporary Security Canada (CSC) were selected on April 15 by Public Works and Government Services Canada and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to provide security services for the upcoming 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver and Whistler, British Columbia.

Aeroguard, Canada's premier security screening service provider, is part of the joint venture that comprises CSC - an integrated team of local and international experts. In addition to Aeroguard, CSC includes Contemporary International Canada, an Olympic security and major event company, and United Protection Security Group, one of Western-Canada's fastest growing security firms.

"Aeroguard's selection to play an integral security role during the Vancouver 2010 Winter Games is definitely good news," explained Jane Greene, Aeroguard President and CEO. "As a proudly Canadian company, Aeroguard is pleased to provide a boost to Canada's economy by participating in a joint venture that will see the hiring and training of an estimated 5,000 Canadian security officers."

Aeroguard delivers total customized and screening solutions for industries including airports contracted by CATSA, cruise lines, police services and major events. Aeroguard has over 1,800 professionals delivering screening services in 24 airports in Canada. Aeroguard is a privately owned Canadian company which has been in the security screening business for 23 years.
